ENHANCING MATURE FIELDS LIFE CYCLES: THE ROLE OF NEW TECHNOLOGIES AND INTEGRATED STRATEGIES

FOUR POINTS SHERATON HOTEL LAGOS, NIGERIA • 11-12 MAY 2017

Petroleum exploration decreased globally in recent years and oil discoveries fell to a sixty year low in 2016. Key exploration projects have been suspended or cancelled due to the lingering low oil price business environment. Meanwhile, oil and gas production in mature fields are fast declining. In this critical business climate, oil and gas companies need innovative strategies and technologies to remain competitive and profitable. A key business strategy consists of extending the life cycles of mature assets either by extending the productive life of the field or by finding extensions to existing pools and new reservoir (or productive interval) discoveries. This requires a robust geological understanding of the depositional basin (environment) from plays to reservoirs. This knowledge therefore underpins other relevant strategic economic solutions.

This workshop will focus on the connection between a strong geological understanding of the fields and the deployment of relevant integrated multi-disciplinary technologies (e.g. acquisition/reprocessing of high-resolution seismic data, surveillance, water flooding, gas injection and other well optimization techniques) that aid the extension of mature fields' life cycles. Several case studies/examples will be drawn from the Niger Delta and from similar clastic deltaic settings in several basins.

Benefits of Attending

This workshop provides the opportunity to learn and discuss the latest knowledge, techniques & technologies applied to mature fields. The workshop will provide a set-up for networking, interacting & sharing expertise with fellow petroleum scientists interested in enhancing production from maturing fields in the Niger Delta and similar deltaic settings.

Who Should Attend?

Geologists, Geophysicists, Reservoir Modelers, Sedimentologists, Petrophysicists, Reservoir Engineers, Team Leads and Managers.
